the round was over I had him flat on his back, and then before the referee could start counting I had him on his feet and on the floor. Holding my gloved hand up for silence, I made a little speech, as follows: "Gentlemen, I have no objection to boxing three men in one night, but I'll be damned if I am going to fight the entire male population of Honolulu for the one prize of domination. You may turn out the lights again if you want to, but I am going to keep my foot on the neck of the first man who attempts to fight." Who Shall Stand the Loss?

and say that they will save money at the expense of unions, even if it be a trifle, they can't very much blame the owners of the trusts if they cut wages and say THAT THEY WILL SAVE MONEY AT THE EXPENSE OF THE WORKERS.

Let workers be faithful to one another first of all. Let the prosperous iron workers help trade unionism in the interests of the less prosperous and powerful men in other trades.

The workers will find that the big men at the top know enough to fight with one another whenever they can, and as long as they can.

And the workers will get the worst of the conflict until they shall learn to do the same.

Why, the Foolish Workingmen, of Course—WHY NOT?
Copyright, 1902, by American-Journal-Examiner worth, WITH THE AID OF THE TARIFF, seems temporarily to have gone to pieces.

Of course, this trouble won't last. Some of the little men will be beaten to death, some will be bought, and the trust, bigger, more powerful, AND WITH MUCH ADDITIONAL WATERED STOCK TO DRAW INTEREST, will go on as usual.

But just now there IS a fight. The big trust and the little so-called "independents" are struggling for the business that has gone to pieces. They must sell iron and steel, rails and building material for prices far below the combination rates charged hitherto by a trust agreement.

When the price of the material is cut, the amount of the income of the manufacturer is cut. Something must be done to make up for the loss of money.

The plans of the trust managers and of the independent managers are already announced. They know HOW to save the money and make up, partly, at least, for the lower prices.

You know that in the making of steel in this country, as in other departments of industry, there are two great classes interested.

First, there are the workmen, the men that dig the ore out of the ground, load it on the cars, handle it in the mills, puddle it, hammer it out, attend to the great furnaces. They deliver the finished product for use.

Second, there are the stock-owners. These are the gentlemen of whom a majority never saw a mine or an iron mill. They have nothing to do with iron, or the making of it. Their interest is confined to the drawing of dividends. Of these many got their Steel stock originally for nothing. Mr. Morgan took Mr. Carnegie's property for three hundred millions; he took other properties for a couple of hundred millions more. That made five hundred millions. Then he added about a THOUSAND MILLIONS of water to this little combination, making something like fifteen hundred millions altogether.

Of the common stock, amounting to hundreds of millions, the greater part was given away, "judiciously distributed" among the big men. Some of it has been bought since by innocent holders. This enormous mass of stock in one trust alone, a BILLION AND A HALF, has been paying dividends. Those that own the stock want to see the price kept as high as possible; THEY WANT, ESPECIALLY, TO SEE THE DIVIDENDS CONTINUE TO COME IN.

Is it necessary to tell you that the owners of this trust and the "independent" gentlemen have decided THAT THE WORKINGMEN'S WAGES SHALL BE CUT FIRST OF ALL?

It might seem natural to you to cut first the dividends, the incomes of those that have nothing to do with making the steel or digging the ore. But if you think that you are very simple-minded, Modern finance says: "Take all possible out of the property, water the stock, put up the prices, combine, cheat and conspire. Take every dollar you can out. Pay the men at the same time as little as you can manage to pay them.

"Then, when trouble comes, and the income and profits are not so fine, CUT DOWN THE WORKINGMEN'S WAGES AND EXPLAIN TO THEM THAT IT IS NOT REASONABLE FOR THEM TO EXPECT TO MAKE AS MUCH MONEY WHEN THE MATERIAL IS SELLING FOR LESS."

OF COURSE, the Steel Trust and the independents announce that they are going to reduce wages as the prices of the material are reduced, and, of course, they WILL reduce them.

And this will continue to happen from time to time, as long as a few big, cunning men are allowed to control monopolies, and as long as occasional fights among themselves and more or less real "tariff scares" make industrial conditions uncertain.

The business man, by the way, who is apt to sniff and snort and sneer "Yellow journalism!" when you talk to him about wages, is asked to remember that this cut in wages MEANS AN ATTACK ON HIS—THE BUSINESS MAN'S—POCKETBOOK. The business man is stupid, indeed, who hasn't learned by this time that his prosperity depends upon the spending power of the people. In a town where ten thousand workmen are engaged in the steel business the merchants depend upon what those workmen get. And those that do a mail order business depend upon what the farmers get. The business man's prosperity GENERALLY depends upon what those workmen get—for the prosperity of the nation is a unit, not a matter of locality.

When you cut a dollar a day off the earnings of a workingman, you cut a dollar of his spending capacity, and you cut that much out of the general prosperity and the money distribution of the country.

Business men in big cities know what would happen if, suddenly, the street car conductors and others, numbering tens of thousands, should be cut down a dollar a day. They know what it has meant for high-class mechanics to be out of work during the past year. They have found that the money they get is the money PAID TO WORKERS and little people, not the money drawn in dividends by Mr. Morgan, who goes to Europe, or Mr. Carnegie, who gives libraries.

There is a meaning and a warning for business men in this Steel Trust fight to reduce the wage of workers.

There is a meaning and a very SEVERE warning also for all workmen, and especially for the workers in the steel business. It is notorious that the men engaged in iron and steel making have of late abandoned their unions in tens of thousands. Every labor man will tell you that the unions in the Steel Trust and the other iron concerns HAVE GONE TO PIECES. The men have had work all the year round; they have had steady jobs, satisfactory wages, and they have said quite bluntly: "Why should we bother with a union, and pay dues when we don't have to? WE HAVE STEADY JOBS!"

They are going to see the other side of the medal, unless this thing shall be adjusted.

They are all divided up, their unions have gone to pieces, not 1 per cent. of the men have pretended to keep up their union connections and fidelity.

Not being organized, they are in no condition to resist the cuts in wages that are proposed. They will learn that it pays for workers to stick together, that a few dollars invested in unions, ESPECIALLY WHEN YOU HAVE COMPETENT AND HONEST LEADERS, are no

Workingmen, like others, need lessons, and severe lessons. They have every prospect of a very severe lesson in the near future.

And the lesson is not underserved.
If workmen engaged in the iron business abandon their union
